THE PATAPSCO STATE PARK SPRING TRIP

May 12, 1946

The scheduled bird walk of May 12, 1946 began auspiciously at the Halethorpe bus terminal. A Baltimore Oriole greeted the group by singing from the treetops nearby. A short automobile ride to Relay and the group lined up on the old viaduct scanning the tree-tops below for migrants. This viaduct is one of the finest places in spring to see the migrating warblers. This morning, however, our luck was not with us; very few warblers were seen. A pair of Downy Woodpeckers was observed entering a nesthole in a tree just below the viaduct.

Our list grew slowly as the party headed up the Patapsco valley. At the Avalon bridge several of the party observed a Prothonotary Warbler. This species seems to be a rare migrant in this area, although five more birds were observed later in the day.

The party broke up at this point with only two bird students to finish out the day. The best observations were made in the afternoon. A heavy downpour dampened our spirits but the sun finally came out and with it the migrants. They were everywhere. The late afternoon was most productive. Birds were seen and heard on all sides.

Turning homeward at dusk, the final observations were made, bringing our list up to 103 different kinds of birds seen in one day in the Patapsco State Park.

CASPIAN TERN AT BIRD RIVER

While making the daily morning round-up of the nature trail on our place at Bird River on April 22, we noticed what we first thought to be a herring gull cruising over the open water between the cat-tails in Swan Creek, one mile upstream from the Gunpowder Railroad bridge. Abreast of us in the bright 7 o'clock sunlight, its black cap and great orange-red bill stood out like a color plate, and Bill McHoul immediately exclaimed "Caspian tern!", remembering the large flocks we had watched at St. Augustine, Florida, the year before. And Caspian it was.

It circled twice over the headwaters of the creek, paraded past us twice at close range, sighted a breakfast morsel and hit the water in good tern fashion, but with all the added bulk of the Caspian behind it. The result was a six-inch trout, held crosswise of the bill, a bit insecurely. The bird headed immediately down the creek fifteen feet above the water, let the fish slip from its bill but retrieved it before it got away. With a new grip on the prey, head-end into its bill, our tern was last seen in straight flight out into the Gunpowder.

THE SEASON

February 15, 1946 to April 15, 1946

The latter part of February was quite normal in its weather with winter temperatures and a couple of light and quickly vanishing snows. March, however, began immediately with unseasonable warmth. Temperatures above seventy were frequent throughout the month and the general level of temperature was high, with but very few relapses and no really cold spells such as we generally expect in the month. As a result vegetation developed with remarkable rapidity. Silver maples in Baltimore were in bloom March 4; alder pollen was abundant March 6; arbutus was flowering March 25; and shadbush was in full flower March 30. These dates give some indication of the precocity of the season. There was a decline in temperatures during the first half of April but it served only to slow up a little the phenomenal development of vegetation which was 10 days in advance of the normal by the end of the period under review.

The warm weather in March did not seem to have such influence on birds as it did on plantlife. The warmth was somewhat early to affect the main body of migrants and the cooler weather in April appears to have brought most of them about on schedule. Unfortunately we have not sufficient data to depict the effect upon wintering waterfowl. Crowder reported redheads, baldpates, and scaup still plentiful in Eastern Bay on Feb. 17, while Hampe found only flocks of 20 to 30 of scaup and old-squaw on the Choptank March 3. A quick departure is suggested by the rarity of waterfowl stopping at Loch Raven during the spring.

Some raptor notes are of interest. No bald eagles were seen on Bird River in the winter until Feb. 18 (Crowder). Courtship behavior by a pair of Cooper's hawks was observed Feb. 23 at Loch Raven (Kolb). The first calls from the barred owl were heard Feb. 21 at Bird River, (Crowder). A nesting of the great horned owl is reported from Halethorpe on April 13 (Hampe). Two eggs and a nestling just hatched were found in a nest of the long-eared owl at Loch Raven on April 14 (Kolb).

The main body of migrating robins went through Baltimore during the last week of February and first few days in March. The migration ended rather abruptly and early; no doubt this was due to the warm weather. As usual, resident robins were first seen many days later in the suburbs than were migrants in adjacent country. Thus the first one was not noted until March 5 in Govans. Singing was first noted on March 7 at Halethorpe (Hampe) and March 12 at Govans. A nest with 4 eggs was found at Arbutus on April 6 (Hampe).

Hampe reports bluebirds inspecting a nest hole March 3, fighting starlings over the nest hole March 26, beginning the nest March 30, and female beginning incubation with the laying of the third of a set of 4 eggs April 7. A nest of a phoebe containing one egg was found at Loch Raven on April 6 (Kolb). Song sparrows were singing lustily on Feb. 18 (Kolb) and Hampe reports courting behavior on March 6. A cardinal had set up a territory by March 10 at Halethorpe (Hampe). Courtship behavior by downy woodpeckers was observed March 28 (Hampe) and by cowbirds April 6 (Kolb). At Bird River Crowder found the first woodcock Feb. 18 and noted courtship flight March 6.

Miscellaneous items of interest are: Several horned grebes at Romancoke Feb. 17 (Crowder); 37 whistling swan at Cambridge March 3 (Hampe); Forster's terns at Romancoke Feb. 17 (Crowder); a hermit thrush delivering some fine song at Loch Raven March 26 (Kolb); a strong wave of golden-crown kinglets at Loch Raven April 14 (Kolb).

ABSTRACT OF MEETINGS

April 12, 1946

Mr. Crowder presided. A number of interesting observations made during the past month were presented by various members from the floor. The speaker for the evening was Mr. Crowder who discussed the family of wood warblers. After general remarks on the group, each of the species to be found in Maryland was treated particularly with respect to the season of occurrence, nesting habits, and recognition points. This talk was one of a series on the larger families of birds. There were 26 members present and 7 visitors; 4 new members were obtained at this meeting.

May 10, 1946

Mr. Crowder presided. The period devoted to observations during the past month was most lively with numerous contributors. Some time was taken up with a review of articles of general interest in the current ornithological magazines. The speaker for the evening was Miss Pearl Heaps who had for her topic the nesting of birds. Using our familiar local species as examples wherever possible she gave a complete discussion of nest-building activities and the behavior closely associated therewith. Her remarks were illustrated by a collection of actual nests. There were 20 members present and 5 visitors; one new member was enrolled.

NOTES AND NEWS

Members who are three months in arrears are automatically dropped from the rolls according to our Constitution. Hence, all March members not paid up for 1946 are regretfully eliminated from our mailing list as of June 30.

Circumstances beyond our control prevented the publication of the membership list as promised in our March-April number. However, the list appears with this issue. It contains all members who joined the Society from its beginning until June 30, 1946. A good many inaccuracies have probably crept in and we will be most grateful to all who will point out corrections.

Because but a small portion of our membership is able to attend our monthly meetings it has been suggested that an abstract from the minutes be published. We begin to do this in the present number. Your comments on the plan are invited.

It seems fitting to record here our indebtedness to the Natural History Society of Maryland for so many favors that it might be said that without the aid of that organization we should scarcely be able to function at all. Not only do we use the lecture hall of the Natural History Society for our regular meetings but we also take advantage of the services of its stenographer and typist to get out our notices and Maryland Birdlife. Materials are furnished to us at cost but the use of the mimeograph machine and many incidental services are most freely and graciously donated to us. We may take this opportunity of expressing to Mr. E. B. Fladung, president of the Natural History Society of Maryland, our sincere appreciation for this assistance.
